

Jetpool earns IS-BAO status, validates safety culture

Charlotte, NC – July 27, 2009 - Jetpool, an aircraft management, shares, and charter company based in Charlotte, North Carolina is pleased to announce it has become an IS-BAO (International Standard for Business Aviation Operations) registered operator. Out of the thousands of aircraft operators worldwide, only 155 companies have achieved this prestigious status. The IS-BAO certification attests to Jetpool's healthy Safety Management System, the cornerstone of the current International Civil Aviation Organization standard and future Federal Aviation Administration regulations.

The IS-BAO process is very rigorous and represented a nine month certification effort, placing Jetpool in the top 1% of aircraft operators worldwide. According to Jetpool CEO Ryan Stone, "Jetpool's Director of Safety and Training, Scott Voglesonger, led the Jetpool team through an extensive series of internal process reviews, improvements, and audits. Then, an independent audit team spent a week onsite investigating every aspect of our operation. Finally, we took corrective actions based on the audits to gain final approval from the International Business Aviation Council Board."

The initial work to achieve IS-BAO status, coupled with our sustained safety improvement culture, is a true testament to the quality of the Jetpool flight department. More importantly, customers can fly on our growing fleet knowing that the Jetpool team has proven it 'walks the safety talk'.
